CALIFORNIA WILDFIRES

1 More than 400 California firefighters were battling to contain a final stretch of wildfire that had caused the partial closure of a major highway and forced evacuations northwest of Los Angeles, officials said. The fire charred more than 1,200 acres between the coastal cities of Ventura and Carpinteria. Firefighters had dug containment lines around 70 percent of the blaze. REUTERS

FIRE RAGES THROUGH ALPHA ROAD TRIPLE-DECKER IN DORCHESTER

7 Sixteen residents of a Dorchester home were displaced after a four-alarm fire tore through a triple-decker at 29 Alpha Rd. on Saturday night. No one was injured, fire officials said. Damage was estimated at $750,000, according to fire department spokesman Steve MacDonald. The Red Cross was assisting the 10 adults and six children who were displaced, MacDonald said. STORMS KILL AT LEAST 34

2 Deadly storms hit Southern and central U.S. states over the Christmas holiday, unleashing floods and tornadoes that killed at least 34 people, toppled buildings and snarled transportation for millions during a busy travel time. At least 11 people were killed in the Dallas area over the weekend by tornadoes, including one packing winds of up to 200 miles per hour. The twister hit the city of Garland, killing eight people and blowing vehicles off highways. REUTERS

HOME INVADERS ARRESTED

4 Three men from Lynn are due in court Monday for their alleged role in a Christmas morning armed home invasion in East Boston. Police said Jose Ventura, 23, Jeremy Ventura, 20, and Francisco Ramirez, 33, forced their way into an apartment on Saratoga Street around 6:30 a.m. on Friday. One carried a bat, another a 4-inch folding knife, according to a police report. SPENCER BUELL

IRAQI ARMY VICTORY

5 Iraq's army declared victory over Islamic State fighters in a provincial capital west of Baghdad, the first major triumph for the U.S.-trained force since it collapsed in the face of an assault by the militants 18 months ago. The capture of Ramadi, capital of mainly Sunni-Muslim Anbar province in the Euphrates River valley west of the capital, deprives Islamic State militants of their biggest prize of 2015. The fighters seized it in May after government troops fled in a defeat. REUTERS

HOME INVASION

6 In another home invasion, three armed suspects wearing masks broke into a Dorchester residence Saturday night, police said. The suspects were described as white men in their 20s or 30s wearing dark clothing carrying a handgun, a knife and brass knuckles, according to a police report. The trio fled before officers arrived and a victim sustained non-life-threatening injuries, police said. There were no reports of items being stolen, police said. SPENCER BUELL

Allston/Brighton, Dorchester see the most rodent, pest problems since 2011

Boston's 311 service does all it can to battle back against rodents, bugs and other unwanted guests.

NATE HOMAN
@MetroBOS
nate.homan@metrou.us

The Allston/Brighton area is affectionately and bitterly known as "Rat City" for a reason.

"I moved [to Allston] in 2009, and at first I couldn't tell if my friends were serious about the 'Rat City' title," Peter Hollis, 22, said. "It didn't take too long for me to see how serious they were. You get used to them running around, and as long as they don't come inside, they're gross but not a problem. Even in our basement, they weren't that much of a nuisance. Once they got into my apartment, then we had a problem."

A call to the city stemmed the rodent invasion, but by no means was Hollis' apartment free from the furry four-legged intruders.

"They're pretty resilient," Hollis said. "And much smarter than I'd

Boston has a notoriously active rodent population. NIC CARNECHI/METRO like to admit."

Since Boston started its 311 program in 2011, Inspectional Services has had a wash of rodent complaints in the Allston/Brighton area — 1,971, according to city data.

Dorchester, Boston's largest neighborhood, came in second with 1,788 complaints. After those two densely populated residential neighborhoods, the numbers in other parts of town dramatically drop off.

The Back Bay saw 648 reports of rodent activity; Beacon Hill had 578. The downtown Boston area had 105. Charlestown saw 129 reports, and the Financial had 486. East Boston had 521, Fenway/Kenmore had 234, Greater Mattapan had 222, Hyde Park had 74, Jamaica Plain had 459, Mission Hill had 144, Roslindale had 132, Roxbury 472, Southie and the Waterfront had 514, South End had 360, West Roxbury had 167. There also were 414 reports in unspecified areas.

During the blizzards and bitter cold in February pest control workers told Metro that they were seeing a dramatic uptick in service calls.

"I don't care if you're a human or any other creature: When it's snowing 2 to 3 feet or it's in the single digit temperatures, you're heading indoors," John Bozajian, owner of Johnny B's Pest Control in South Boston said at the time. "But between last year's [2014] polar vortex and the snow this year, we had more calls for mice than we've had in last 15 years."

So far, this winter has been balmy enough that most rodents aren't seeking indoor shelter. Yet.

Other uninvited house guests, like cockroaches, termites, bed bugs and any other structural pests came and went as they pleased throughout the bitter cold and record-breaking snow without a decrease in population or an increase in calls for service.

Since 2011, Dorchester saw the most calls for non-rodent pest control issues with 175, followed by Allston/Brighton with 117. Roxbury came in third place 125.

West Roxbury saw the fewest calls for bugs with 11.

Snow may be returning to Hub

The first snowstorm of the season is expected to leave measurable amounts of snow in the Boston area Tuesday. Shoppers stock up on snow equipment. NICOLAUS CZARNIECKI/WBUR

Winter arrives after record warmth.

Boston may finally see some snowfall this week, as forecasters are predicting a wintry mix for Monday into Tuesday.

Everyone flocking to hardware stores to stock up on shovels and salt may get a chance to use them, with 1 to 2 inches of snow predicted overnight Monday into Tuesday, turning to a mix with the possibility of freezing rain, according to Nicole Belk, a National Weather Service meteorologist.

At the Home Depot, in South Bay, Bernard Pendleton, 65, of Dorchester, told Metro on Sunday he was buying his first snowblower to prep for the coming season.

After the "panic we went through last year, I'm trying to do what I didn't do last winter," he said.

Dorchester 14-year-old hit by bullet

Police are investigating a shooting in which a 14-year-old boy was hit in Dorchester on Saturday night.

Police responded to the area of 128 Stratton St. after a call around 7 p.m., where the victim had been hit in the leg by a bullet, police said.

His injuries were described as non-life threatening.

There were no suspects in the shooting, and a police spokeswoman could not say whether the boy had been targeted or had been injured by a stray bullet.

$10 minimum wage starts Jan. 1

Low-wage workers in Massachusetts are set to see a pay increase in the New Year. The state's minimum wage climbs to $10 starting Jan. 1, up from the current statewide $9 minimum.

Next year, per legislation passed in 2014, the state's minimum wage climbs to $11.

Also starting at the beginning of 2016, state income tax is set to drop from 5.15 percent to 5.1 percent, a move that will shift $152 out of the revenue stream and into taxpayers' pockets.

Buzziest celeb moments of 2015

It wasn't a great year for being famous and married, that's for sure.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

The worlds of celebrity and pop culture were filled with plenty of attention-grabbing moments over the course of 2015, and sometimes enough similar ones — like when a long-married celeb couple calls it quits — to constitute a troubling trend. Here's what got our attention this year.

were greatly overshadowed by the number of married couples that packed it in. From Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner to Halle Berry and Olivier Martinez, 2015 really looked like the year of knowing when to say when. Heck, "The Voice" judges Gwen Stefani and Blake Shelton even had time to parlay their splits — from Gavin Rossdale and Miranda Lambert, respectively — into a new, camera-friendly romance.

2 Justin Bieber makes a comeback

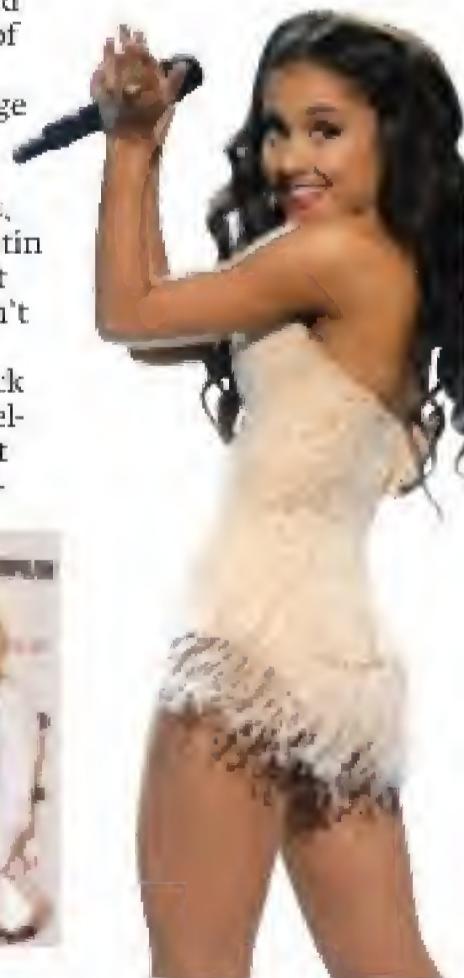

In 2014, Justin Bieber was Canada's most hated export. But this year, a pop-culture miracle occurred and he is back on top thanks to excessively apologizing and releasing some actually very good new music. Joining forces with Skrillex and Diplo, Bieber's song "What Do You Mean?" debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard Hot 100 charts.

thunder of ex Caitlyn Jenner. But did it work? Well, we now know who Tyga is, and Kim K. continues to dominate Instagram and Twitter. Kanye even said he's running for president, and we actually humored him. That's got to count for something.

4 Taylor Swift's overstuffed squad

Taylor Swift hit the road this year for her "1989" tour and decided to use it as a chance to prove to the world that she knows a lot — and we do mean a lot — of famous people, with special cameos onstage by everyone: the U.S. women's soccer team, Karlie Kloss, Miranda Lambert, Justin Timberlake — the list goes on. But she wasn't impossible to say no to. No less than Patrick Stewart and Ian McKellen were able to resist her charms. And hon-

The (absolute) best of Boston culture in 2015

Another little end-of-the-year list of the city's goodness

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

'Twas a big year for cultural highs in Boston, and we spent a long time figuring out what was the creme de la creme. What made our lives and our city more interesting, more convenient, more beautiful, more delicious and more fun? Here's our list of the best things that we liked best about Boston in 2015.

The city's dedication to public art has been admirable, and we'll never forget Janet Echelman's aerial rope sculpture that swooped over the Rose Kennedy Greenway in May. The installation piece — a 600-foot span of shimmering polyethylene rope — was suspended from skyscrapers and gently swayed and changed colors in the wind.

It's a bird! It's a plane! It's a cultural renaissance! DINAH RUDICK/THE BOSTON GLOBE VIA GETTY IMAGES

And the Lawn on D? Don't get us started.

There was enough buzz surrounding Johnny Depp's performance as Whitey Bulger in "Black Mass" to keep the city in the pop culture public eye all year; but it was "Spotlight" that stole its thunder. The journalism tour du force paints our city in a light that's not grim and gritty, but real, respectable and conversation-changing.

While not a new notion, it was still a big year for Asian small plates, with many already noted culinary names opening spinoff joints in the category. Among them: Tiffani Faison's Tiger Mama and Tim and Nancy Cushman's Hojoko in Fenway, and the South End's Banyan by the crew that brought us Blackbird Donuts and The Gallows. And as we said goodbye to some beloved classics — so long, Clio; we'll always love you. West Bridget — shared communal concepts reigned king. Non-stuffy raw bars (Select), West Coast-passable tacos (Loco) updated mezze (Committee) and the delightfully experimental

Keala Settle, Jessie Mueller, and Jeanna de Waal in "Waitress" EVGENIA BUSEEVA

(Cafe ArtScience) won us over again and again.

Meanwhile, the Boston Public Market brought local farm stands to Haymarket, while Stop & Shop's millennial-focused concept, Bfresh, stockpiled organic produce to Allston. Roche Brothers' behemoth store in Downtown Crossing also marked a change in the air for the work-in-progress retail neighborhood when it opened in April. Oh, and did we mention CityTarget?

Primark and Uniq-

lo opened flagships in the city this year, meaning two contemporary international retailers are finally recognizing Boston's always growing younger demo with cash to burn as a profitable draw.

It was a lovely year at the theater for Boston's many stages, but the A.R.T. production of "Waitress," featuring the tunes of Sara Bareilles, is the one still stuck in our heads. Literally. Based on the film by the late Adrienne Shelly, it hits Broadway in the spring.

'Million Dollar Listing' gurus reveal their first jobs

Spoiler: They were not glamorous.

Who is the greatest salesperson ever?

Historical legends range from Dale Carnegie to cosmetics queen Mary Kay Ash. But today's TV viewers may be more familiar with stars of the Bravo franchise "Million Dollar Listing."

Each of the reality TV real estate agents sells hundreds of millions of dollars' of property in New York and Los Angeles every year. But some of them began their careers with jobs that could literally make you cry.

We asked these real estate titans about their humble beginnings and what they learned from them.

Fredrik Eklund

"Million Dollar Listing New York"; author of "The Sell"

First job:
Chopping onions

"I grew up in Sweden, and it was mandatory when you were in school to have a job for two weeks. Around age 12, they just send you out into the workforce, and I was assigned to a famous restaurant in Stockholm called PA & Co.

"My job was to chop onions in the kitchen. I cried a lot at the time, but I actually developed an obsession with onions: Now I can eat them like apples, and I put raw onions on everything."

"I still go back to that restaurant all the time, and get one of the best tables. I like to sit by the window and reminisce."

Ryan Serhant

"Million Dollar Listing New York"

First job: Carrying

"I was a laborer for Testa Building & Remodeling in Andover, Massachusetts, and my job was to take 80-pound bags of shingles up ladders, where roofers would hammer them in. I did that for three years and made around $8 an hour, which when you're 15 is a significant amount of money."

bags of roof shingles

"I was a laborer for Testa Building & Remodeling in Andover, Massachusetts, and my job was to take 80-pound bags of shingles up ladders, where roofers would hammer them in. I did that for three years and made around $8 an hour, which when you're 15 is a significant amount of money."

"But my real goal in life was to be a movie star, and I always said that one day I would come back and have them build me a $10 million house. I told the owner that all the time."

"It was such an intense experience for me. I liked that once the workday was over, it was over, and you didn't have to think about it anymore. Nowadays, my work never ends."

"There were definitely days that we hated it, but looking back, I can't imagine not having gone through it. When I meet people now who have never done manual labor, I can tell right away. They just don't know what it means to get dirty."

Josh Altman

"Million Dollar

Listing Los Angeles"; author of "It's Your Move"

First job: Sorting mail

"When I first moved to Los Angeles from Boston, I had no money and no connections. My rollerblades were my car, and my brother's couch was my bed. I literally went around town just trying to find anything, and the only place I could get a job was in the mailroom, at a music agency called The Firm."

"I did everything from getting people's lunch to answering phones to delivering mail to getting dry-cleaning. All the horrible stuff. I got paid $7.50 an hour, and I'll tell you exactly what I spent it on: taking out the best agents at the company for drinks or lunch or dinner, to hear their stories of how they became a success."

"That's actually how I first heard about real estate, because some agents were making extra money selling houses on the side."

"When I flipped my first house and made $200,000, I kept it polite and classy: I went into my boss' office and just said, 'Thanks for the opportunity.' That's how I quit. But I really hated my boss, and wanted to say something else." REUTERS

EXPECT BIG THINGS FROM SOX, PATS, C'S AND B'S IN 2016

@dannypicard

As the new year approaches, it's time to look into the crystal ball and see what Boston's sports teams will have in store for 2016.

Let's start with the Red Sox, who have bolstered their pitching staff by signing starter David Price and trading for closer Craig Kimbrel. Both acquisitions were huge upgrades to a team that had one of the worst ERAs in the league in 2015. It remains to be seen if Dave Dombrowski is done making major moves this offseason. But if the Red Sox want to be a World Series contender in 2016, they'll need another dominant starter before the July 31 trade deadline. Look for crazy rumors regarding pitchers like Sonny Gray and Chris Sale to swirl this coming summer. But one of those blockbuster trades won't be made until the following offseason. The Red Sox will win the AL East, but will fall short of their ultimate goal in the postseason, losing to the Houston Astros in the ALCS.

Before that happens, we'll have known the fate of both the Bruins and Celtics. Both teams will advance to the playoffs. Neither will win the ultimate prize. The Bruins won't win their division, but they'll be better than a wild card team, thanks to Tuukka Rask's dominant second half of the regular season. The B's will fall short of acquiring a much-needed top-four defenseman at the trade deadline, and that will be their ultimate downfall in the Stanley Cup playoffs. Expect the Bruins to win at least one round, but depending on their opponent after that, the B's won't be getting out of the Eastern Conference with the current cast of defensemen.

The Celtics will make a blockbuster trade before the Feb. 18 trade deadline. And yes, that acquisition will be in the form of DeMarcus Cousins. Suddenly in a winning environment, Cousins' well-documented "issues" will be a thing of the past, as the C's shine in the national spotlight. With Cousins aboard, the Celtics will advance to the Eastern Conference Finals. But they won't be getting by the Cleveland Cavaliers just yet. Still, it won't be considered a failure, because everyone around the league will get to see how exciting the Celtics are going to be for years to come. And free agents will want in Boston in 2016. Yes, Tom Brady will be hoisting the Lombardi Trophy for the second straight year. This time he'll be doing it in the city of the team he grew up rooting for, San Francisco.

Expect Deflategate to steal the headlines once again, in the following weeks, as the NFL's appeal is heard. But Brady still won't be suspended, and the Super Bowl 50 championship will be just another reminder of the Patriots' revenge factor that was a product of Deflategate.

Pats lose in overtime

Bill Belichick has always been unconventional. So it's both surprising and unsurprising that the Patriots chose to kick when overtime started Sunday. The gamble didn't pay off, as the potent Jets offense would not give the ball back.

DECKED OUT

Looking to end a 20-20 deadlock and move into playoff position, New York marched down the field and an Eric Decker 6-yard touchdown catch earned the Jets win No. 10, 26-20.

Ryan Fitzpatrick picked apart New England's typically sound secondary with a 48-yard pass to Quincy Enunwa and a 20-yarder to Brandon Marshall to move the Jets into scoring range.

Fitzpatrick would out-duel Tom Brady, compiling 296 yards and three touchdown passes — two to Brandon Marshall, who eclipsed 100 receptions for the sixth time in his career. Brady threw for 231 yards and an interception as the Pats were outgained 428-284 by the Jets.

Brady did flash his usual brilliance late in the fourth quarter, as he hit James White for a game-tying scoring strike just inside the two-minute mark.

New York holds its own playoff destiny now sitting in the second wild-card spot. They can still clinch a berth with some help — but a win will guarantee they play at least into January's second week.

The Patriots have yet to clinch home field advantage in the playoffs, dropping to 12-3 with one game to go, a 1 p.m. matchup with the Dolphins Sunday.

The Jets are also on the road for their regular-season finale, in Buffalo against Rex Ryan's Bills. EWAN MACE

Binge eating is a disorder, not a decision.

[Do you have uncontrollable binge eating episodes? Do you feel embarrassment and guilt after eating excessive amounts of food? **]

Binge Eating Disorder, or B.E.D., is the most common eating disorder among adults in the US, more common than bulimia or anorexia.

If you have had at least two binge eating episodes a week for the past SIX months, you may be eligible to take part in a medical research study testing an investigational medication in adults with B.E.D.

Those who qualify to take part in this medical research study will receive all study-related tests and the investigational medication at no cost. Reimbursement for travel and related expenses may be available for completed study visits.

Aries If someone is giving you a hard time, the best way to handle the situation is to present yourself and what you do with confidence.

Taurus Give friends and loved ones your undivided attention. Sharing ideas and making social plans will boost your morale and inspire you to do well.

Gemini Reminiscing can be enlightening, but don't live in the past. It's important to learn from experience so that you can move forward.

Cancer It's important to take care of your health. Use your intelligence to ward off any negative influences or argumentative people.

Leo Put an end to old habits. Find something you enjoy doing that will contribute to your health and wellness. Once you get started, it will be easy.

Virgo You have a lot to give and plenty to gain if you participate in events that offer both personal incentives and a different point of view.

Libra Keep your opinions to yourself. Avoiding an altercation with someone is in your best interest. Use your energy to make personal physical improvements.

Scorpio Whatever you do, give it your all. Put your skills and knowledge to the test and offer to do something extraordinary for a friend.

Sagittarius Invest more time into honing your skills. You can bring about positive change, but first you have to have everything in place.

Capricorn You will be appreciated and rewarded for all the little extras you do for friends. You'll be offered information that will benefit a cause.

Aquarius Make your health a priority. Sign up for something that will challenge you physically. Express the way you feel in order to resolve a matter.

Pisces Check in with people from your past who you feel can contribute to something. Help is just a phone call away. EUGENIA LAST
